BYE, AGOURA: Bassist Nikki Sixx flees the hills.

Mötley, but the house isn't

By RUTH RYON
Times Staff Writer

Mötley Crüe bassist Nikki Sixx and his wife, former "Baywatch" star Donna D'Errico, finally finished refurbishing their Agoura Hills home of eight years, and now they've put it on the market at close to $3 million. During the last four or five years, D'Errico orchestrated an updating of the 6,000-plus-square-foot house on 40 acres. Remodeling the 1982 house included a complete overhaul of the kitchen.

Between renovation projects, the actress, 38, and her 48-year-old, spiky-haired, glam-rock husband busied themselves in their careers. Then in April, after nine years of marriage, she filed for divorce.

There is one bright spot: The house looks better than ever. It is one of those ironies in life.

The Spanish-style villa has six bedrooms, 4½ bathrooms, a family room, a formal dining room and a bonus room. The master bedroom suite has a balcony, vaulted ceiling, two walk-in closets, a spa tub, a steam shower and a redwood sauna. One of the other bedrooms was designed as a sound studio. All the closets are cedar-lined.

The kitchen was remodeled in 2002 with granite counters, slate floors, hand-hewn oak cabinets, top-of-the-line appliances, a copper sink and a built-in cappuccino machine. D'Errico designed the kitchen, built by Tobe Laughton of Dreamworks Construction. The grounds have a pool, spa, meditation garden, vegetable garden, playground and mountain views. The villa is in a gated community of four homes. Each is on a 40-acre parcel. A river-rock waterfall accents the house's double-door entry, which is reached by a private drive.

Sixx, a founding member of Mötley Crüe in 1981, is on a national tour with Aerosmith. "Shout at the Devil" (1983) was one of the band's early hits. More recently, Mötley Crüe's 1984 single "Looks That Kill" was used in the 2003 movie "Charlie's Angels: Full Throttle." And the band also performed "Kickstart My Heart" for this summer's "Talladega Nights: The Ballad of Ricky Bobby," a NASCAR parody film starring Will Ferrell.

D'Errico, who played Donna Marco on "Baywatch" and was Playmate of the Month for September 1995, is writing her autobiography. She appears in the upcoming movie "Intervention," which also features Jennifer Tilly and Andie MacDowell.

Veronica Aravena and Matthew Schroeder, both of Rodeo Realty in Calabasas, have the listing.

REFURBISHED: This Spanish home, owned by Nikki Sixx and Donna D'Errico, is on a 40-acre lot.

OLD LOOK: The Sixx villa in Agoura Hills, which was originally built in 1982, has a completely remodeled kitchen.
